

Writers Helping Writers

The Writers Helping Writers category is about giving voice to the facilitators, educators, and producers who are running writing events, projects, initiatives, workshops, and more. Please tell us about your work, the effect you wish to have on the writing community, any opportunities for writers to get involved. You may choose to include some information about yourself and your journey to creating your project, or to write about a particular cause or issue your work addresses. The choice is yours.

We are looking for prose pieces of up to 750 words. In this category, we are accepting: blog posts, articles, anecdotes, and personal essays.
